RESISTANCE SCHOOL LAUNCHES SEMESTER TWO:
Emphasis on Leadership, Announces New West Coast Campus

CAMBRIDGE, MA -- Resistance School released today their semester two schedule, focusing on leadership. With over 175,000 participants tuning in last semester, Resistance School announces a second campus at UC Berkeley with Resistance School @ Berkeley. The new west coast campus represents a growing effort on behalf of Resistance School to provide practical skills to Reclaim, Rebuild, and Reimagine an America built on progressive values.

Conor Hand, Co-Founder of Resistance School, noted, “People all around this country continue to be engaged in the future of America. This is the time for all communities to echo our founding fathers -- in the spirit of the people by the people-- let's reimagine our future, organize to reclaim it, and rebuild it around progressive values”.

Kori Anderson, Co-Founder and Communications Director of Resistance School @ Berkeley agreed. “Last semester affirmed a national appetite for skills-based training for sustained political organizing. Resistance School’s expansion at Berkeley is evidence of the need to further provide these skills,” said Anderson.

Resistance School is a free online training program that puts practical tools in the hands of organizers, activists, and everyday people working to promote fairness, equity, and inclusivity in their community. Using a consistent pedagogy across speakers that draws from best online training practices, Resistance School provides participants a foundation of skills and knowledge leading to effective action in the 2018 elections and beyond.

SAVE THE DATES:
Berkeley Session One: Thursday, October 5, 2017
Harvard Session One: Thursday, October 12, 2017
About Resistance School:

Resistance School was founded by graduate students at Harvard, who wanted to find a way to contribute to the wave of new and renewed political activism in communities across the country. The curriculum was designed for groups to join trainings held on Harvard’s campus and live-streamed online to communities across the country.

Resistance School aims to deepen community-based organizing infrastructure nationwide in order to secure issue and electoral victories at the local, state, and national level and advance progressive values of fairness, equity, and inclusivity. Resistance School believes that the power of collective action can break through barriers that undermine the people’s access to democracy.

Recordings of semester one of Resistance School are available for unlimited playback at www.resistanceschool.com and via Facebook Live (https://www.facebook.com/ResistSchool/).

Resistance School is a student-run initiative developed by students at Harvard University, and is not an official course offering of Harvard University or any of its schools.

About Resistance School @ Berkeley
